

SOUL BEAUTY MOMENT

You Don't Need a Spiritual Résumé

Sometimes we quietly ask ourselves, “Am I doing enough?”

*Enough serving. Enough praying. Enough giving.
Enough ministry. Enough good.*

But Jesus reminds us in Matthew 6 that the Father isn't impressed by a résumé of religious activity. He is looking at the heart behind it.

*And maybe the question isn't, “Have I done enough?”
Maybe it's: “Am I surrendered?”*

Because good works were never meant to become the currency we use to purchase God's approval. They are the fruit of a life that already belongs to Him.

I don't pray so people will think I'm spiritual.
I don't serve so people will recognize my calling.
I don't give so someone will applaud my generosity.
And I don't have to keep score to convince myself that I'm valuable to God.

My good works are fruit, not currency.

Jesus said, “thy Father, which seeth in secret, shall reward thee openly.” — Matthew 6:4 KJV

There is freedom in knowing that the Father sees the things nobody applauds.

So today, release the spiritual scoreboard.

Serve Him. Love Him. Obey Him. And when He gives you an assignment, do it because you belong to Him—not because you're trying to prove that you do.

True beauty is soul beauty—a soul that belongs to Christ.
